

The Destiny of El Paso is About to be Indissolubly Linked With That of San Diego, Her Sister City of the Wonderful Harbor

The most powerful independent capital on the Pacific Coast is now building a splendid line of railway of the most approved modern construction Eastward from San Diego, and in a little more than another year these two magic young cities will be joined by the shortest trunk line that can ever be built between El Paso and tidewater

Over this artery of trade will thereafter flow the principal freight and passenger traffic of the Southwest.

El Paso merchants and jobbers will then receive a large part of their supplies by this newer and cheaper route through San Diego harbor, and the delightfully cool beach points of San Diego will become the favorite summer resort of El Paso citizens.

San Diego, with its splendid present activity, its unprecedented growth and development and its magnificent future, is becoming of immense interest to El Pasoans and the numbers that are acquiring property interests there evidence a constantly closer cementing of the bond between the two cities. El Paso is the natural gateway to Mexico and the distributing point for the rich mining section of the intermountain territory, and in her turn San Diego is her nearest seaport and the great ocean gateway of the whole inland Southwest. There is every reason, therefore, why El Pasoans should take a deep interest in San Diego's progress and learn the facts about this splendid young city.

San Diego now has over 50,000 people and is growing faster than any city in the land. It has doubled in population in the last four years and the most conservative concede that it will double again in the next three years and become a city of 100,000 people.

Great things are in store for San Diego. A new railroad that will open its magnificent parlor to the whole Southwest is under construction. The completion of the Panama Canal will make its harbor (which will be the first port of call in the United States) one of the busiest and most important on the Pacific coast. The holding of the Panama-California exposition at San Diego in 1915 will bring vast crowds there to further add to its activity.

San Diego is a city of wonderful and varied attractions. Its destiny is many sided. With the most remarkable climate in the known world, a superb natural harbor, a location as the natural gateway of a great developing part of the country, a position of strategic importance upon the newly developing trade points of the world, a remarkably fertile and productive tributary territory and a beauty of site that is the marvel of travelers, San Diego is rapidly developing and has a great destiny as a wonderfully attractive city of beautiful homes; a city of great industries, and as one of the greatest commercial cities on the Pacific Coast.

For the man or woman with a little money to invest or the one looking for a delightful summer home by the seashore—San Diego is the most attractive place in the land. It is the place of places for the young man or woman who wish to make their start in a healthy young city and grow up into independence with it.

The most remarkable exhibit showing a city's resources, advantages, attractions and opportunities ever prepared has been installed in our offices in order that every man and woman in El Paso may know what San Diego has and is, and what the growth of San Diego means to El Paso. We are here to talk to you and tell you all about it. All are invited to view this exhibit.

TEXAN DIES FROM WOUNDS IN CANANEA

Cananea, Mex., April 23.—William Davis, supposed to be from Paris, Tex., died here as a result of mysterious wounds. He was found near the Duluth mine. A short time previously he had been seen with two Mexicans in the red light district.

The wound causing his death was a stab under his left arm, which reached his heart. Another wound was below the ribs also on the left side.

Davis came to Cananea about two weeks ago and has been working at the concentrator for 10 days, having charge of a gang of Mexicans. He was about 23 years old, and has a Mexican wife living at San Antonio. He came here from Mexico City and was a chauffeur by profession.

He gave the names of relatives at Paris, Tex., and at Oklahoma City, Okla., before he died, but the Paris police chief can't locate the relatives.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bedwetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box W, Notre Dame, Ind., will send free to any mother her successful home-treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her today if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.
